

September 06, 2017

10 THINGS TO DO

School's back on but events they are aplenty

By GRAHAM MEYER |

Stanley Tigerman's "The Titanic," 1978

Photo by The Art Institute of Chicago

1 Just a few days in advance of the Chicago Architecture Biennial, in a Modern Wing gallery adjoining the second-floor cafe, the Art Institute of Chicago opens "Past Forward," a new, permanent, ever-changing exhibit about 20th- and 21st-century architecture and design. This architecture and design focus for the exhibit, which the Art Institute calls the first of its kind in the United States, allows for display of items in the museum's collection that don't often emerge from storage, and for recognition of an artistic field where Chicago excels. The opening collection shows works by Stanley Tigerman and Bertrand Goldberg, and the description of the vision for the exhibit mentions Daniel Burnham, Studio Gang and Mies. Opens Sep. 12. Free-$25 museum admission. Art Institute of Chicago, 111 S. Michigan Ave.